FEATURED STORY
(Al-Anon's Monthly Magazine)

The Serenity I Saw in You

When I started going to meetings, I didn't know what made all of you so happy and content, but I wanted to feel that way. I kept coming back and, without even realizing it, I started feeling the peace that I saw in all of you. But first I had to learn many things and make them part of my life. I had to learn to:

- Accept that I am not perfect and learn to forgive my mistakes.
- "Live and Let Live."
- Stop worrying.
- Stop manipulating—I can ask for what I need.
- Believe that no one has the power to make me unhappy.
- Recognize the big difference between being assertive and being aggressive.
- Understand that being powerless doesn't mean being helpless.
- Accept that being humble is not the same as being humiliated.
- Recognize the difference between offering support and enabling.
- Take care of myself, which is not selfish.

I learned that when I stop trying to tell my Higher Power how and when to do what I want, I get what I need. And I know that the thing I need the most is the serenity that the program has given me.
